Approve New Malting Barley

Outagamie, Calumet Growers Among 10 Listed in State

Two Fox Valley area farmers are among the 10 approved certified seed growers of a new barley variety added to the list of approved malting varieties in

George Jeske, route 1, Hortonville, and Henry J. Horst, route 4. Chilton, are named on the preliminary list of trophy growers released by the Wisconsin Crop Improvement Association

The Trophy strain was developed in North Dakota and has been tested in the state for several years Field performance been good and kernel plumpness has been better than that of Traill, a popular variety. Trophy was classed as an acceptable malting variety for the 1964 crop season.

Aside from Trophy and Traill, Kindred is the other variety recommended for malting barley production in the state

Both Horst and Jeske are approved Traill growers.

Actual Coating of Blood Vessels With Sugar Derivative

ATLANTA (AP)-A good way to avoid a heart attack is to keep active, says a research scientist; or, you could have your blood vessels coated.

An exciting new concept in treating thrombosis is the basis for a research program at the Ferst Research Center.

Dr. Walter L. Bloom, 48, director of research at Piedmont Hospital, where the research center is located, sees a bright future for heart patients.

But, says Bloom, he does not want to cause too much opti-

"We are entirely in the ex-perimental stage," he said in

Process Successful Bloom revealed that the process which he developed has been carried out successfully on thrombosis patients in two other places, including the Army's Brooke Hospital in Texas. The treatment involves the actual coating of the blood vessels on the inside with a substance called Dextran. The solution is made from ordinary table sugar and it is administered with a hypodermic needle. What the Dextran does to the blood vessels is to keep blood clots from reforming, and thus assure the free flow of blood which may have been interrupted by damage. The research center has been given a $92.793 grant from John A. Hartford Foundation Inc., to cary out a three-year experimental program.

Shock Treatment

Bloom said doctors at Piedmont have used Dextran for about 10 years for treatment of shock patients. He said it first was developed in Sweden, and then was used in England before it was first used in this country at Piedmont.

There is no limitation on the number of times a person may have his veins or blood vessels coated, said Bloom. He said some patients in the experimental program have taken Dextran once a week for more than two

Although he said many elderly persons suffering with thrombosis may benefit, he was cautious.

'There are many things about this treatment which we do not know," Bloom said. "We know generally, for instance, what the maximum dosage of Dextran is, but we do not know the mini-

Like Isaid, Charlie, PRODUCTION CREDIT is a bargain in money

Yes, it cost me plenty to learn the difference between interest costs and interest rates

PCA Loans Cost Less Because of the Unique PCA Way of Figuring Interest

Mr. Former, do you understand exactly how your interest cost is figured? You probably have a percentage figure in mind . . . an interest rate that you say you pay. But rates can be misleading. It's the total interest cost that counts. For instance, PCA's costs are lower for two important reasons:

- (1) You are charged interest only for the money you use and the time that you use it.
- (2) Full payment stops all interest charges immediately.

Let your PCA man explain the low dollar cost of PCA credit. The easiest method is to compare your present loan, dollar for dollar, and see what it would cost you from Production Credit. Stop by your local PCA office. The facts will surprise you!

Finding this very small amount of pesticide residue requires a highly trained chemist to spend a large amount of time in the analysis of a sample. The department lab is staffed with one chemist in charge, three analytical chemists, and one laboratory aid. The labs efforts are devoted completely to the detection and analysis of pesticide residues. for Holiday Reading

Gather the whole family together for a revealing interview with the man who has all the Christmas answers . . . good old Santa Claus himself.

Color is the word for Christmas, and colorful is the picture review of Christmas trimmings . . . of trees, of doors, of Christmas cards.

They used to ring to the laughter of children and the hourly summons to classes: today, the fate of the old school buildings in the Fox Cities area makes nostalgic reading for those who like to think on the past.

and There's More!

Last week, "Family Weekly" exposed the women who have been the influence in Nelson Rockefeller's romantic life. This "Family Weekly" reveals the women playing an important role in the life of Barry Goldwater . . . plus . . . featuring the man "who destroyed Christmas".

The ladies (and their men) can follow "Hints from Heloise" right into the varied pages of "View" magazine starting this week. There are also fanciful and delicious recipes for holiday cookies, and an explanation of how basketball maneuvers get that way.

Congressional Logiam Broken

Congressional action has been completed on the first major piece of legislation since President Johnson moved into the White House, but there is some question as to how much his influence counted in this particular instance. On the other hand final agreement on a packagé of aidto-education measures has unsnarled a knotty parliamentary jam and may enable Congress to write a productive final chapter to its sparse 1963 record.

One of the measures sets up $1,195.-000,000 in federal aids for the construction of classrooms, libraries and laboratories at colleges and universities, both public and private. It is the first major new program of federal aid to education since 1958.

The second measure expands and continues federal grants for vocational education, and it is this bill which produced the logiam. The final compromise gives poorer states a break in the distribution of vocational school funds, but not as much of a break as was originally proposed. In its original form the measure proposed a 75-25 per cent formula, but wealthier states would not accept this distribution and the final compromise was on a 60-40 basis.

Federal aids in the vocational field will be boosted from $58 million to $103 million the first year and will increase each year thereafter until they reach the $301 million level by the 1967-68 school year. The measure also imposes new guidelines to promote training for such new modern skills as data processing while downgrading emphasis on farm work and homemaking

Passage of the education measures clears the way for possible action before. Dec. 20 on a whole packet of appropriation bills which the President has told Congress should be expedited. Favorable action could also come on extending the federal job retraining program and on increasing studies of air pollution control. It is even possible that a compromise might be reached on the foreign aid bill

The agreement which produced action on the education bills was in the works before President Johnson took charge. But there is mounting evidence that his constant pressure on Congress to finish work on these other measures is beginning to produce results.

Congress will adjourn for the holidays Dec. 20 and will probably reconvene Jan. 6 or 7. Then the civil rights and tax cut bills will become first order of business. And if President Johnson continues to be as persuasive those measures too could become law early next year.

Studebaker Moves to Canada

Aside from the nostalgic element, there are some puzzling factors in the Studebaker Corporation's decision to close down production of automobiles at its American plant in South Bend, Ind. The decision cuts the number of major American auto manufacturers from five to four and removes an old and respected name from the field.

But the corporation has also announced that it plans to step up auto production at its Canadian plant near Hamilton and serve its American market from there. The Canadian plant has up to now produced autos for sale in Canada and for export to other countries.

"The high productivity and efficiency of the Hamilton plant should permit continuance of Studebaker's automotive activities on a profitable, though more restricted basis." Company President Byers Burlingame explained.

But autos produced in Canada are subject to an eight per cent American import duty. The Hamilton plant thus would have to be considerably more efficient than was the American operation for Studebaker to be able to continue to compete in the American market.

Canadian auto workers earn an average of $2.50 per hour versus $3 in the U.S. and have fewer fringe benefits.

More than 6,000 employes of the South Editor, Post-Crescent: Bend plant are expected to be thrown out of work. Maybe the United Auto Workers are going to have to start looking at this matter of constantly increasing wages and fringes as the steelworkers did a few years ago when the steel industry began to face the threat of intense foreign competition.

Chickens and Brandy

Because the Common Market has cut off imports of chickens from the United States, you may soon be paying as much as $2 more for a fifth of French brandy.

The United States has now retaliated against Common Market action a year ago in tripling the duty on poultry. Another item on which the U.S. tariff has been raised are German trucks, whose selling price in this country will go up about $200

Recently an impartial panel found that the United States had lost $26 million worth of trade a year with the Common Market because of the higher poultry tariffs. They ruled that the United States could retaliate by raising duties on imports from Europe by an equivalent associate of a racketeer. In recent years there have been many apparent tie-ups between the big money underworld and some of Hollywood's less particular stars. The amount of cash in Hollywood as well as its glamour is attractive to those who dwell on the fringes of the law.

The United States selected items that would penalize Germany and France primarily. This was because France was mainly responsible for the action of the Common Market on poultry. France wanted the huge German poultry market which the United States had created, and persuaded Common Market authorities to give it to them.

The action and counteraction worries American business concerns which export other products to the Common Market. They fear that the "chicken war" will spread to other items of trade between us.

There are some indications that officials in Brussels are taking another look at the problem after the U. S. action. There must be a solution which would be better for both the Common Market and the United States.

Huge New Building in Madison Monument to Government Growth

BY JOHN WYNGAARD MADISON - As the year civil servants in Madison will move their desks and other trappings from present quarters to a buge new sub - capitol which will dominate the sky-line of the capital city. The new state office building will be one of the finest and biggest and undoubtedly the most expensive ever built in the capital city. What is perhaps more SOME DEFAULT important about it, however, is that it stands as a visible symbol of the huge and steady growth in the size of the governmental establishment in Wisconsin, state and local. There will be far more space and there will be a considerably greater population inhabitating that new building than there are in the state capitol proper, on the square in downtown Madison, which is the usual mental image of the state government center.

In point of fact, the state capitol will after January 1 house only a small minority of the state establishment. The vast majority will occupy space in the two big auxiliary office buildings in Madison, some scattered private space here that must be rented in spite of the vast enlargement state-owned facilities, the district centers that are being erected around Wisconsin, and the numerous and growing out-lying institutions.

Our dollars do not stead, that it may be accelermeet with our nation's progress with the expenses we must meet in our daily needs.

A case can be made for the assertion that the growth has been conservative. The last turns, some thousands of state two governors of Wisconsin. for example, would have enacted more service expansion bills, if they had the power and the opportunity. Both were aware of a skeptical political majority in the legislature, which in turn was worried about the limitations of the state tax base. Parentheticaliy, there isn't much in the recora to show that Republicans are significantly less willing to expand governmental services than are Democrats. What is apparent that they are less willing to raise taxes.

The growth in the size and the function of the national government is one of the most visible of the major historical trends of the times. Federal taxation presses heavily even upon the humblest person. But a part of the growth of the federal budget has been due to the default of the states, through inability, or unwillingness. Examples are numerous, and include education, highways, relief of the indigent, health services.

The federal tax dollar has become so vital to the University of Wisconsin that it now maintains one of its best men in Washington as a full-time liaison agent with congress and the spending departments. Employed privately, he would be called a lobbyist.
